New Fire Truck Plan Hits Snag

The move inaugurated recently to open a campaign for a new fire truck for Mokena and vicinity after a report had been made that the old truck is inadequate to afford fire protection outside of the village, has met with a setback.

At the meeting of the group interested in better fire protection held at the Hatch hall Monday night a number of technical questions came up which threw a monkey wrench into the works for the time being. One of the questions was who should own the truck, the fire department or the village? Another point was the creation of a fire district outside of the incorporated limits of the village. Editor Wm. Semmler suggested that in order to have a clearer understanding of the situation, Fred Scheel of the New Lenox Fire Protection District should be contacted and thru him learn what procedure was used in New Lenox township to create a fire district, also to contact the Fire Chiefs of Frankfort, Orland Park and Tinley Park regarding their setup.

John Scarth, chairman of the group then appointed Harold Miller, John Balaz and Alvin Sorenson as a committee to get the needed information. Another meeting of this group will be held at Hatch hall on the evening of July 2 at 8:00 o'clock.

Pictures and data of fire fighting equipment and cost of same was presented at the meeting.

Mokena Board Buys 1300 Feet of New Fire Hose

With the dissolution of the Mokena Fire Department no track has been kept of the village fire fighting equipment until recently when an investigation was made of the equipment.

The report showed the fire truck is in need of repairs. The past week the fire hose was put under a water main pressure test and nearly all the hose tested blew up. The hose had rotted from mildew and cracks caused by frozen water. The committee having charge of the test showed that with the large amount of hose absolutely useless in case of fire, the village really had no fire protection whatever. The village board at their meeting Tuesday night got busy to remedy this situation by placing an order for 1300 feet of new hose at a cost of $900. This amount of hose with about 225 feet of still usable hose on hand now gives the village 1525 feet of hose a long enough lead to reach any property within the confines of the incorporated area of the village. The old fire truck is to be repaired and placed in a servicable condition.

REPUBLICAN JUDICIAL CANDIDATES ELECTED BY 2 TO 1 MAJORITY

Overwhelming their Democratic coalition ticket opponents by pluralities ranging up to 11,900 votes, Judges James V. Bartley, Roscoe C. South and C. D. Henry, the three Republican candidates for the circuit judgeships in the 12th judicial circuit, were swept into office Monday, the unofficial count showed. They were named for six-year term.

Judges Bartley and South are incumbents, who are completing their first term on the circuit bench. Judge Henry is county judge in Kankakee county.

According to the unofficial count the most votes were polled by Judge South of Waukegan, Illinois county, who has a total of 17,066, giving him a margin of 90 votes over Judge Bartley of Joliet, and 700 more than Judge Henry.

Of the scattered Democratic vote, Geo. N. Blatt Sr. of Joliet, led the party with 5,105 votes, the unofficial count discloses. His running mates were approximately a thousand votes behind, with John H. Beckers, former county judge in Kankakee county, trailing with 4,055 votes.

Returns from Mokena Precinct No. 2 of Frankfort township are: 141 straight Republican, 18 straight Democratic, Bartley 150 Henry 151, South, 155.

WILL CO. VOTES PENSION FOR RETIRING COUNTY EMPLOYEES

By a two to one majority, the voters of Will County Monday placed their stamp of approval on the plan of having the county employees included in the Illinois municipal retirement fund which will give to the workers disability, retirement and death benefits. The plan will go into effect Jan. 1, 1946.

According to the unofficial count, the retirement plan was voted in by a margin of 3,258 votes. The unofficial tally shows votes on the special ballot as follows: Yes—3,296; No—3,038.

Altho there were some 11,000 votes cast in the county in the judicial race, apparently only 9,334 voted on the retirement issue. Others failed to mark the second ballot. Failure to mark the ballot did not constitute a "no" vote, it was pointed out. Only ballots that were marked either Yes or No could be counted and in order to be adopted, the plan needed only the majority of the votes cast on the issue.

Neighbors Do Real Neighbor Act For Sick Farmer

Last Tuesday evening, a neighborly act was performed when a group gathered at the Bartel Andresen home on 167th St., Alpine bringing with them their tractors, seven in number and plowed, disced and planted the acreage on that farm.

It all came about when Henry Andresen, son of Mr. Bartel Andresen was taken suddenly ill with appendicitis and had to pay a hurried visit to Silver Cross hospital to have the culprit removed. Those emergency affairs are never welcome, much less at planting time on the farm. But it is all done, and Henry has returned from the hospital and can take time to gain his strength now that his neighbors were so kind to him.

Those in the planting party Tuesday evening were: James Tilsy, Harry Rogers, George, Nicholas and Louis Marti, Earl Sayers, Donald Doctor and Arthur Andresen, Mr. Herman Gee and his helper came at another day and helped with the farm work and planting.

Much Needed Improvement Now Seems Assured

Mokena's drainage problem appears to be coming to a climax with the creation of a new drainage system for the southside of the village. As stated in a previous article on this subject, the plan is to lay large enough tile to drain off the surface water from the village streets and basements which empties onto the farm land of Fred Yunker on the south side of the village.

Harold Spiess, treasurer of the so called "South End Drainage" states that approximately 90 percent of the total amount assessed against the various properties being benefited by the proposed drainage has thus far been paid in. The heaviest payments have been made by Fred Yunker, $1950; L. E. Janes, $812.50; Fred Robinson, $812.50; Geo. Warning, $200. A number of $20 assessments have also been paid in. The township and the village are also to pay toward the project. A list of all those who have paid in for this improvement will be published next week.

Soon as the estimated amount for the cost of the project has been raised work will be commenced on it.

Sen. Wayland Brooks Tells Editors of Nazi Atrocities

Last Friday, an all day meeting of northeastern Illinois publishers met in the Baker Hotel, St. Charles, Ill. for the annual spring meeting, it taking the place of the regular state convention which is not being held this year in accordance with the national requirements. Editor and Mrs. Wm. Semmler attended this meeting.

Among the many fine speakers was Senator "Curly" Brooks who flew that afternoon from Washington, D. C. to St. Charles to give what he termed, a report of his investigating trip to Germany, two weeks previous to V-E day.

This trip was made possible by Gen. Eisenhower inviting six members of the U. S. Congress, six members of the English parliament, 12 newspaper men each from the United States and England to come to him in Germany and have him take them on a trip so they might see first hand conditions that existed when the Allied armies arrived in Germany.

Senator Brooks said they flew on a C-54, a motored plane. Before taking off from this country the officer in charge of the plane gave a lecture for two hours on what to do, what each valve and gadget was for and how to use it, in case they would have to take to the ocean.

But nothing unusual happened. They went from Washington, D. C. to Bermuda, then to the Azores, then to France, landing in Paris. At once they were taken 450 miles to where Gen. Eisenhower was.

The next day they were started on their investigating trip, their first stop being at a concentration camp (continued on back page)

GERMAN PRISON LABOR

Officials are keeping very mum about it, but the entire question of using German prison labor to rebuild Russia and France has been thrown into a new controversy by a secret opinion rendered by Supreme Court Justice Robert Jackson, who has taken over U. S. prosecution of war criminals.

Justice Jackson wrote his opinion to U. S. Reparations Chief Ed Pauley, stating that in his opinion compulsory German labor should not be used to rebuild France and Russia unless they have been convicted of war crimes.

"It is not my business what is to be done with reparations," Jackson wrote, "but this would largely destroy the moral position of America in this war. . . . Compulsory labor," he continued, "should be required only for convicted war criminals."

Jackson went on to point out that German labor "drifting out of Russian concentration camps in the future would tell tales of horror" which, even if exaggerated, would "arouse sharp condemnation in the United States." He urged, therefore, that German labor not be used for reparations until they had been convicted of war crimes. He indicated that members of the Gestapo and the SS Elite guard undoubtedly were war criminals as a class, but the every member of the Nazi party might not be classified as a war criminal.

Following Justice Jackson's bombshell, a hurried meeting was called in Secretary Morgenthau's office, attended by Ed Pauley, Assistant Secretary of State Will Clayton, the army, navy, FEA, and other interested government agencies. Secretary Morgenthau vigorously protested this new development. It was pointed out by some that the use of German prison labor had been agreed to at Yalta by President Roosevelt himself and, therefore, could not be changed.

"If we have to wait for the conviction of all these war criminals before we can get German labor," suggested Reparations Chief Pauley, "we may have to wait a year. Meanwhile, there may not be enough Germans to repair the damage in France and Russia."

Pauley also made the point that he had been charged by the President with the handling of reparations and, therefore, would have to make the final decision himself after his arrival in Europe. After further discussion, however, Pauley agreed to accept Justice Jackson's opinion in principle, namely, that only convicted war criminals could be used as prisoner labor. This leaves the whole question pretty much up in the air.

However, it has been hinted that Justice Jackson will endeavor to indict groups of Germans as a class. In other words, he may try the Gestapo as a group, not individually, and decide that every member of the Gestapo automatically is a war criminal. This probably will be done with Hitler's SS Elite corps. Whether a blanket indictment will also be lodged against the Nazi party remains to be seen.

TRAINING FILMS DESTROYED.

The army doesn't want it known, but it has a new way of handling one type of surplus property. In the case of training and orientation film, it burns old prints. According to a survey made by movie experts, old films last summer were being burned at the rate of 225 tons weekly at Astoria, N. Y.

Meanwhile other government agencies, schools and universities are anxious to buy these outmoded prints from the army. In fact, the U. S. office of transportation had to spend $60,000 of the taxpayers' money to make 10 new reels of its own when the army refused to sell it the army's excellent series of 20 reels for the training of auto mechanics.

Sen. Francis Myers of Pennsylvania, Democrat, has just written Maj. Gen. Harry Ingles, chief of the signal corps, demanding an explanation.

The making of training films and orientation films by the army has been a major operation. Thousands of subjects have been turned out at a tremendous outlay, and production schedules have been more crowded than those of any Hollywood studio.

The films have proved remarkable training aids, with officers claiming that they cut at least in half the length of time needed to teach men such things as first aid, etc.

THE MINISTRY OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—Mark 1:14, 15; Luke 4:16-21; Mark 8:27a, 29, 31.

GOLDEN TEXT—I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly.—John 10:10.

The dawn of a new day had come! The long-promised and expected Messiah came to break the 400 years of silence by His personal presence.

We learn of His coming, His life and ministry, His death and resurrection, and find the promise of His coming again in the four Gospels. They are our complete lesson for this Sunday, but we obviously cannot review them in their entirety in our limited space.

Our Scripture references speak of His ministry in presenting the good news of the gospel to needy mankind.

I. The Good News Preached

(Mark 1:14, 15).

Jesus always honored preaching as the primary and the effective means of spreading the good news of the gospel.

The forerunner, John the Baptist, had borne his witness. Jesus had come, had been baptized, and as John was cast into prison, He began to preach, "Repent ye and believe the gospel." The key verse of Mark is 10:45: "For even the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister." The characteristic words are "straightway," "forthwith," and "immediately." The Greek word thus translated appears about forty times in the book.

The Servant of God went quickly about the Father's business. Christians, can we say the same for ourselves?

II. The Good News Practiced

(Luke 4:16-21).

The daily ministry of Jesus as He lived here on earth is summarized in the prophecy of His coming which was given by Isaiah the prophet. As we read these words, we realize that we who profess to follow Him need to learn more of His spirit of tender and loving service to others.

It is significant and appropriate that Jesus' declaration of Himself as the fulfillment of Isaiah 61:1, 2 was made in the synagogue on the Sabbath day. He met with the people in the house and at the time set apart for God's worship. He opposed spiritual deadness, the misinterpretation of the truth, the distortion of religious principles; but He was not, as some would have us believe, a religious free lance who despised the established worship of His people.

Having been prepared by the thirty years of privacy, and more particularly by the baptism and the temptation in the wilderness, He appeared at the synagogue in Nazareth to declare Himself as the fulfillment of prophecy.

Those who teach that Jesus was only a young Jewish teacher with a new philosophy of life have evidently not read the Scriptures. He knew Himself to be God's Son come into the world to bring the good news of salvation by His own blood to poor, sin-captive, blinded and bruised humanity. He is the Saviour.

Look at Isaiah 61:1, 2 and note that Jesus stopped reading before the end of the sentence. "The day of vengeance of our God" will come when Christ returns. This is the day of grace. Sinners are urged to accept God's love now, and thus to escape the terrible day of judgment which is to come.

III. The Good News Prepared

(Mark 8:27a, 29, 31).

Jesus preached the gospel of the kingdom. He went about doing good, but always He knew Himself to be the Christ, the One who was to die for the sins of the world and to arise again for the justification of those who put their trust in Him.

Even those who deny to our Christ the recognition of His deity, and the devotion of life which is His just due, must, if they are at all intelligent, admit that no man ever lived who has made such an impact on human history. Even now, unbelieving men speak of Him as the founder of Christianity, a mighty leader, a wonderful example, or an unequalled teacher.

It is not enough that we stand with the mass of humanity who may thus admire Him, but who do not count Him as Saviour and Lord. The question comes to us as it did to the disciples, "Whom say ye that I am?" "Thou art the Christ"—this alone suffices as the foundation for Christian testimony and conduct.

Although Jesus was not yet ready to have His Messiahship proclaimed to the public, He was prepared to teach His disciples concerning not only that important truth, but of His rejection and death.

Note the divine "must" (v. 31). While it is true that wicked men showed their hostility toward our God and His Christ by hanging Him on Calvary's cross, yet it was to die for our sins that He came into the world. The cross has rightly come to represent God's love to the world rather than man's hostility to God.

Barbecue Table and Benches That Match

EATING out of doors is fun no matter whether it is your own back yard, summer camp, porch or terrace. Food tastes twice as good served picnic style. Children love it and it is an ideal way for everyone to be gay and carefree.

If you are an old hand at this sort of thing you know that sturdy tables and benches are essential.

The large table shown here is six feet long with a bin underneath for paper napkins, serving forks and spoons, fruit and things that will be needed. The benches pull up close to the table with no conflicting legs. The extra table is the same height as benches and may be used at the end of the table if needed.

NOTE—Pattern 279 gives large cutting diagrams, illustrated directions for assembling and a complete list of materials for each of these pieces of barbecue furniture for your summer picnics. To get pattern 279, send 15 cents with name and address direct to:

Train Serves Table

The Maharaja of Gwalior, India, owns one of the costliest yet most useful miniature railroad trains in existence, says Collier's. Made of silver and operated by electricity, it travels slowly around the great dining table in the royal palace during meals with its dozen trucks loaded with fruits, nuts, confections and wines.

It automatically stops and starts every few feet so its dishes and decanters may be removed or replaced.

Thunderhead

MARY O'HARA
W.N.U. FEATURES

THE STORY THUS FAR: A white colt is born on the Goose Bar ranch, high in the Rockies of southern Wyoming. Its color indicates that it is a throwback to the Albino, a wild stallion. Its sire is Appalachian, a famous racing stud. A few months on the range changes the white foal, named Thunderhead but commonly called Goblin, from an ungainly, awkward beast to a strong and intelligent animal, big for his age. During the winter he is brought in to the stables, fed oats, and given a little training. Goblin is sent back to the range again in May, a full-fledged yearling. One day he starts off southward on a lone journey of exploration. He comes to the foot of a range of mountains.

CHAPTER IX

Another thing that had happened—a band of horses was grazing near the highway. A car passed, filled with noisy, ugly-looking men. Going up the hill by the overpass, one of them had shouted, "See that old mare? Bet I can hit her!"

He had taken his gun, stood up in the car, and pulled the trigger.

The section gang working on the railroad that ran alongside the highway saw the whole thing. They saw the man shoot, saw the mare leap spasmodically, then go down with a crash, heard the burst of raucous laughter from the men, saw the car speed up and vanish over the hill.

Ken began to shake in bed. A white colt in a band of dark horses—how easy to mark and single out! However, there would have been the body—they hadn't found any body. There was some comfort in that.

Goblin, meanwhile, was feeding in lush pastures south of the border. Though in a single afternoon's play on the Saddle Back he or any one of the yearlings could run twenty miles and not know it, he had taken a full week to work his way to the foot of the Buckhorn Range. There was so much to see on the way. So many dells and ravines to explore. So many hillocks to stand upon, gazing and studying and sniffing—so wide a country—so many bands of antelope and elk. The grass in every meadow tasted different.

It was in this fashion that the Goblin moved. After his first start southward he had just drifted. Now—here he was.

It was the river that interested him. He had smelled it for miles before he reached it. He had never seen anything like it. It took him a long time to decide that there was nothing dangerous about it, though it moved. It plunged and leaped. It hurled itself over rocks. It tossed chunks of itself into the air. It was alive therefore. It had a voice too. A loud voice that never ceased its burble of sound. Incessantly, it talked, whispered, gurgled, chuckled.

Having power in himself, he knew that there was power in the river. Facing it, standing there on the brink, he felt that it challenged him, and he gathered himself to fight back.

In an hour he had accepted the fact that the river would not attack him. It ignored him. Nothing he did altered its course or its behavior. He drank from it, at last, and the river did not even mind that.

He followed it upward. It was leading him further into those hills which got steeper as they got closer until they sheered up, leaning over him. And the river was narrower, between higher walls. Its voice was a deep roar now. Occasionally, looking ahead, he would see it coming down over a wall of rock—blue on the slide, a smother of white below.

So it happened that he was standing on a flat rock, just gathering himself to leap to another rock in midstream when the thing was flung against his legs, so terrifying him that he made his leap badly, and was swept into the channel, and from then on knew nothing but the struggle to keep his nose above water and claw himself out.

When he accomplished this he was some yards downstream. Even while he was shaking himself, his head turned to look back. What was it that had hit him? He must know. It was still there on the rock on which he had been standing, and it didn't move.

With his ears alert and his eyes fastened on it, Goblin went back and investigated.

A foal! Not so unlike himself, except that instead of being all white, it had brown markings on it. It was, in fact, like Calico, his piebald Granny.

Goblin was shuddering all over. The foal had no eyes—they had been picked out. In half a dozen places there were bloody gashes—

It was at this moment that he leaped to meet the flapping black cloud that dropped down upon him from the sky. Huge pinions beat about his head. The creature was as big as he was himself. Goblin emitted the first real scream of his life when, for a moment, the terrible face looked closely into his own, and the great hooked beak drove for his eyes.

Goblin reared and went over backward, the eagle flailing him with wings, beak, and talons. Rolling on the narrow rocky beach half in and half out of water Goblin struggled to get from under the creature. When he gained his feet, with the instinct of the fighting stallion, he darted his head down to bite the foreleg of his enemy. He got it between his teeth and crunched.

He was clawed by the other leg, his shoulder was raked and gouged. The beating wings buffeted his head like clubs. He held on. The beak struck him again and again. Blood spurted from his neck and belly.

Suddenly it was gone, shooting straight upward, then sliding into the shelter of the pines. Goblin stood alone, the thin shank, partly covered with fine, closely set feathers, and the curled, cold, fist-like claw, dangling from his teeth. There was a thin, bad-smelling blood oozing from the end of it.

He dropped it and stood shuddering. It terrified him. Then, with his insatiable curiosity, he must stoop to smell it again.

Never would he forget that smell. It sent him up on his hind legs, snorting. His ears were filled with the sound the eagle was making—a furious screaming. "Kark! Kark! Kark!" He leaped away from that fatal spot and went scrambling over the rocks downstream, working away from the river bank toward easier going.

The eagle peered from his pine tree. He sat on a bare bough, balancing himself on one claw and one stump and his spread wings. At his repeated cry of rage the woods around became alive with small, frightened, scurrying animals. His eyes, terrible in their far vision and their predatory determination, were fastened on the colt galloping northward, a white streak down the dark brink of the canyon and at last a moving dot on the plains, five miles away.

The Goblin used the speed that he had never used before; that had reached him, coiled like invisible, microscopic snakes, in the chromosomes passed down to him by his forbears.

It was a great run. Next morning when the sun rose, the Goblin stood comfortably among the yearlings of the Goose Bar ranch, turned broadside to the delicious penetrating rays, snoring softly in peace and blissful ease.

It lasted for a week—the peace and the bliss. A week in which, as it happened, no one of the McLaughlin family discovered that the prodigal had returned.

It was during that week that young Ken McLaughlin, in a fury of despair over the loss of his colt, stood on the top of Castle Rock and hurled down the cherished stop watch which was to have timed the future racer.

At the end of the week Goblin left the herd of yearlings and drifted south again. His terror had changed, as all terror should, into knowledge and acceptance of a danger; a lesson learned. And those mountains down there exerted an irresistible fascination over him. He went more slowly than before. He spent a week grazing with a little band of antelope in a dell-like valley on the way. And he explored extensively on both sides of the lower reaches of the river.

When at last he reached the rock where he had been attacked by the eagle it was near the end of July. This time there was no piebald foal lying across the rock in midstream, no monster bird in the air.

Goblin spent a half-hour by that rock, smelling and snorting, going over every inch of the little beach where he and the eagle had fought. Something like a dried curled branch lay upon it with a darkish clot on the end. He circled it, then reared and came down pawing at it. He cut it to bits and ground it into the earth.

He followed the torrent upward until he could follow it no longer. It filled the gorge. Streams ran over the sides of the cliff to join it. In the crevices of rock were pockets of snow. The stream was choked with the spring floods. It pounded and churned. A dead tree drifting down was hurled tens of feet into the air.

Goblin looked at the river a long time. He raised his head. What was beyond? Up there? His nostrils flared. The river and the rock walls were so steep and so high that he could no longer see the sky, only craggy peaks, and ever more of them. But up beyond all that was where he must go.

Cows and horses are by instinct expert engineers and will always find the easiest way through a mountainous country. Goblin detoured from the river on the eastern side. He had stiff climbing to do but there were breaks in the river walls and running with the brood mares on the Saddle Back had made him as sure-footed as a goat. Hours of hard going brought him at length to the last grassy terrace before the rocks shot up in an almost sheer cliff. The place was like a park with clumps of pine and rock, little dells and groves; and, scattered at the base of the cliff and on its summit, numbers of the huge smooth-surfaced stones like the one balanced on the top of Castle Rock on the Goose Bar ranch.

Some of them as large as houses and perfectly smooth and spherical, these boulders are to be found all through the country of the Continental Divide, creating a wonder in the mind of any beholder as to what great glaciers in what bygone age could have ground and polished them and left them at last hanging by a hair on narrow shelves of rock, or balanced on peaks, or suspended above crevices where one inch more of space on either side would have freed them to go crashing down.

Goblin was hungry. He took his bearings first, then began to graze. Rounding a clump of trees he halted and lifted his head sharply. There, not a hundred yards away, close to the base of the cliff wall, were two handsome bay colts grazing.

Goblin was quiet for a moment, savoring the interest and delight of a meeting with some of his own kind. Then he whinnied and stamped his foot. The colts looked up. With innocent friendliness they trotted toward him. Being a stranger Goblin had to discover certain things immediately. Were these mares or stallions? Where did they come from? Would they be friends or enemies? So, just as children, meeting, always ask each other, What's your name? How old are you? Where do you live?—these colts exchanged information, squealing and snorting and jumping about.

This was interrupted by a ringing neigh that came, it seemed, right out of the wall of rock. The colts responded immediately. They whinnied in answer and galloped toward the wall, angling off to a place at some distance where a ridge ran jaggedly up the cliff. And then, to Goblin's amazement, they galloped right into the wall and disappeared.

Goblin galloped after. Turning the shoulder of the ridge, he found himself in a narrow chasm which split the rampart of rock and led some distance into the heart of it. There was no sign of the colts, but the passageway was full of the smell of horses. Goblin trotted confidently on.

Suddenly there was a harsh scream from above, and the shadow of wide wings drifted across the chasm.

As long as he lived a moving shadow falling upon him from above would galvanize Goblin into terrified action. He crouched, backing, and his up-flung head and straining eyes tried to spy out his enemy. But not by looking could the colt see and apprehend the eagle's eyrie, clinging to a ledge far up on the peak, with one eagle sitting on the edge of the nest, and the other—the one-legged eagle—drifting down over the chasm.

Colts and eagles live on different planes. Only by the cold shadow falling on him, only by the scream, with its strange mingling of ferocity and sadness, only by the horror and shuddering within himself could he know his danger.

He plunged forward, driving straight toward the rock which apparently closed the path. But arriving there, the passageway turned. He went on, zigzagging. He saw and heard nothing more of the eagle.

At last the sides of the chasm sloped away, exposing a wider wedge of sky. And in front of him was a mass of the great boulders which seemed to have been rolled down the sides, choking the chasm completely.

But there was still the smell of horses—Goblin went on. And a turn showed him an open way through—a sort of keyhole, roofed with a single great boulder which hung on slight unevenness on the side walls. Beyond, Goblin glimpsed blue sky and green grass. Galloping through, he came out into brilliant sunlight and a far vista of valley and mountain.

Goblin had found his way into the crater of an extinct volcano. Two miles or more across and of an irregular oblong shape, the valley was belly-deep in the finest mountain grass. Here and there, rocky or tree-covered hills rose from the valley floor, reaching as high as the jagged and perpendicular cliff which ringed it and shut it in.

Your 1945 Garden New Vegetables Should Be Kept Ever-Growing

ONE of the principal objectives of a Victory garden is to supply fresh vegetables throughout the growing season. To obtain that objective frequent or successive plantings or replantings are necessary in some of the quick growing crops.

Not only will replantings provide this continuous supply, but the gardener will reap to the full the product of his land, earning therefore a larger return on his investment.

Just as soon as one crop has finished bearing, the plants should be pulled, the ground prepared and another crop planted.

Care too, should be taken not to plant all of one variety of crop at the same planting, but to stagger planting so that a continuous crop may be gathered throughout the season.

Although a pattern cannot be set to fit all sections of the country because of differences in the length of the growing season, in most sections as many as three crops may be harvested on the same ground. For instance in many of the green crops like chard, which are among the earliest planted in the garden, it may be followed with lettuce, and then late in July the lettuce may be followed with Chantenay carrots.

Snap and pole beans may be followed immediately with turnips after the beans have been harvested. After harvesting the early beets, carrots and turnips, collards may be planted.

Cabbage requires a very fertile soil and heavy applications of fertilizer high in nitrogen for good yields and quality. Top dressings of nitrate of soda or ammonium sulfate should be made at about monthly intervals after the plants have been set. In regions of mild winters where the average last spring frost occurs about April 1 to 10, Early Jersey Wakefield and Charleston Wakefield may be planted two to four weeks before the first frost free date, and may again be planted in the fall about Thanksgiving time and wintered over. Golden Acres is another good early variety. Copenhagen Market and Glory of Enkhuizen are successively later varieties. Still later kinds are All Seasons, Early Flat Dutch and Succession. The commonest late varieties are Late Flat Dutch and Danish Ballhead.

Chard, properly spaced, is one of the earliest crops, may be followed by carrots, beets or other root crop.

Cabbage maggots are an early enemy of the small cabbage plants. An ingenious method of protection is to cut circular collars of tar paper, five to six inches in diameter, fit them around the small cabbage stems and lay flat on the ground. This may be done by cutting the paper with scissors to the center and then cut a small hole at the center to fit the stem.

Onions Important Part of Garden

Nearly every gardener wants to grow a few onions and attempts to grow them are made nearly everywhere. Some variety or kind of green onions may be grown at some season of the year in every state, but mature dry onions fail far too commonly in home gardens because suitable varieties and procedures are not used. Onions are sensitive to weather, insects and diseases. They require a very rich soil and only varieties suited to the region should be planted. Onions planted from seed should be carefully watched, for the seedlings are delicate and cannot make a good start in soil that bakes or forms a crust. Thorough, careful and timely weeding is especially important because the seedlings cannot compete with weeds.

The commonest method of starting onions in the home garden is by sets, and under average conditions, probably this is the best chance of success for green onions.

Both commercial seedsmen and public research agencies are breeding an ever-increasing number of high-quality, productive, new varieties of vegetables, many of which are resistant to one or more diseases and some of which are especially adapted to certain parts of the country. Gardeners should ask for the new kinds that have proved superior and available.

Some varieties are for early planting and some for later planting. The variety should be chosen which is recommended for planting at the particular time it is to be used.

The elements are our greatest battle here. However we are fortunate to have the ocean at our front door, Red Cross building on the ocean where patients who are able to be up spend the day playing cards, cribbage, ping pong if weather permits a boat trip weekly.

Time to go on duty, many thanks again.

Dear Friends:

It's been some time since I last wrote and am very sorry just carelessness on my part but promise to be more prompt next time.

To start off with I want to thank you for the home town paper. Its been coming regularly every week and has kept me well posted on the town news. I also want to thank you for remembering me this Easter with your swell card and gift. I appreciate it very much.

It means a lot to us things the committee is doing every week, the paper and on the holidays remembered by all the friends back home, its really swell and I know that's the way we all feel. Keep up the good work. Hoping all is well at home will call it quits for now. So till next time.

Always, Johnny Bellante

USS LST 534

At Sea

Dear Friends:

I received your wonderful Easter gift while in port in San Diego a week or so ago. I think it is the most useful gift you could have sent to anyone in the service. I know it was appreciated by all.

Some of the fellows remarked that they wished they lived in a small town so they would be thought of as the men and women of Tinley are.

There has been nothing unusual happening aboard the LST other than seeing the Panama Canal and Cuba.

I receive the Times very regular, that is as regular as we get any mail which has been twice in seven weeks.

That is about all the news I have for now. Thanks again for the thoughtful gift.

Sincerely, R. E. Nitche

Dear Folks:

I'm awfully sorry I didn't answer sooner but we've so busy these last couple weeks we hardly find time to sleep.

I received the Tinley Park Times a couple times and it sure feels like home just to read about it. The weather here is warm and rainy right now. I'm in good health and hope to be home soon by the sound of the radio tonight the surrender of Germany is well on its way. I see my neighbor Otto Juergens once in a while he being 1-2 miles from me.

This camp is pretty well in size so 1-2 miles isn't far. I hope to see him tomorrow. Its late and I'm tired so I think I'll close. Loads of thanks for the stationary and sure can use it. Greetings to the whole community and God bless you all.

As ever, Pvt. Edwin Feigel

Dear Friends:

Once again I find myself thanking you for all your fine presents and it seems to me as if your last one was the best not only was it a timely one but a much needed one around here, not only for myself but half the outfit I'm with.

As now I'm on Okinawa Island. What a place, the civies around here are really something to see, there are very few who are over five feet, the kids are getting smart enough to ask for our cigarettes and all our D ration candy which we are only to glad to give them.

Well I have at last found a fellow from the old home town, by the name of Weinert, a darn nice fellow. But he made a mistake a few days ago that sent him to the hospital. He will be out in no time. He happens to be in the same Company as I. I really thought it would be impossible to see one of the home town boys till I get back. The home town population was 800 when I left and there being about 5,000 in the Marines it was a surprise to meet him and in the same outfit too. Well I will sign off for now will be looking forward for the next home town paper.

Sincerely, Bill Burleson

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES
The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, June 3, was:

"ANCIENT AND MODERN NECROMANCY, ALIAS MESMERISM AND HYPNOTISM, DENOUNCED"

The Golden Text was:

"When the enemy shall come in like a flood, the spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him" (Isa. 59: 19).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible:

"Thus saith the Lord of hosts, Harken unto unto the words of the prophets that prophesy unto you: they make you vain: they speak a vision of their own heart, and not out of the mouth of the Lord. . . Behold, I am against them that prophesy false dreams, saith the Lord, and do tell them, and cause my people to err by their lies, and by their lightness; yet I sent them not, nor commanded them: therefore they shall not profit this people at all, saith the Lord" (Jer. 23: 16, 32).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy:

"As named in Christian Science, animal magnetism or hypnotism is the specific term for error, or mortal mind. It is the false belief that mind is in matter, and is both evil and good; that evil is as real as good and more powerful. This belief has not one quality of Truth. . . Christ came to destroy the belief of sin. The God-principle is omnipresent and omnipotent. God is everywhere, and nothing apart from Him is present or has power" (pp. 103, 473).

Gulfport, Miss. May 30, 1945.

Mokena Women's Service Club, Dear Ladies: This much belated letter is to thank you for your Xmas box, Easter card, birthday card and money.

I am deeply gratified to be remembered so generously by you. At present I am working in the photo-section at Gulfport Field. The work is very interesting and I am glad I can now use some of the knowledge I gained as a civilian photographer in my work in the army. Thank you again for your generous gifts.

Sincerely yours,

(Pvt.) Victor W. Demkov.

May 20, 1945

Dear Folks: It is a rainy day and I laid in my sack all morning so I know nothing better to do than to write letters this afternoon.

Thanks very much for the swell Easter card. It is very nice to know that you folks back there are thinking of us. I am sure we all appreciate it.

As for me I can't complain because there are a lot of fellows worse off than I. We get a carton of cigarettes a week and beer twice a week if you want it. For the first time in at least five months we had sunny side eggs and orange the other morning. There again I believe that I am a little luckier than some of the other fellows.

I really would like to get back and get a little of winter. I don't agree much with the same kind of weather all the year around. A fellow hardly knows what time of the year it is.

We have a chance to see a movie every night. We see all the latest pictures and sometimes before they are released in the States. The fellows in this tent have a speaker connected to a radio in another tent and does that State-side sound good. The song that has us now is, "My Dreams Are Getting Better All The Time".

I receive the News-Bulletin, I would not say regularly but all I care about is that I get it.

I will close now and thanks again for the Easter card.

So long, Bill

Erosion Menaces Vast Area
Of Middle West Farm Lands

CHICAGO—Although more than 75 per cent of America's Grade A farm land is located in the Middle West, an alarming share of this priceless resource is being lost each year by erosion and the steady drain from marketed crops and livestock, according to a statement by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

The statement listed as "weapons" in the anti-erosion fight such measures as "a permanent soil building program that includes regular crop rotation, the growing of legumes for cover purposes and adequate applications of mixed fertilizer."

"While legumes are an important source of nitrogen and help replenish the land's humus," says the statement, "they make extensive demands on the soil's supply of phosphorus and potash. These demands must be met by adequate fertilization."

DEEP IN THE CENTER

Khufu, or CHEOPS, king in the IV dynasty (3700 B. C.), erected a monument which through all the ages has been one of the wonders of the world.

Cheops' pyramid, 756 feet square at the base, covers an area of 13 acres. Deep in the center and directly under its 451 foot peak (it was originally 481 feet high), the king's chamber is located. The walls, floor and ceiling of this chamber are flat slabs of granite. The massive sarcophagus was hewn out of blocks of red granite.

Thus, through more than five thousand, six hundred years, granite proves its permanency. That is why it is preferred as a memorial material today... together with its beautiful, even texture and color.

Our granites come from the Nation's finest quarries. Gracefully designed and skillfully carved, you will find these impressive memorials most desirable for perpetuating your family name and history. We invite your leisurely inspection of these superlative memorial values.

Germany

May 19, 1945

Dear Mr. Semmler:

Just a few lines to let you know I am now receiving the News Bulletin and enjoy the copies very much. I got my first two copies today and they were of March 30 and April 6. They were quite late but I don't mind that so much because home territory news is always interesting, regardless of how old it is. I sure have been waiting a long time for my first News Bulletin, I know you have been mailing them regularly, but for some reason or other they have not been coming thru to me. I hope the Bulletin comes regularly from now on, as I'm always anxious to read that home news, and especially the news concerning all the others in the services.

It sure gives us a feeling of relief over here now that VE has arrived, but there's really no special reason for celebration until one can set foot on the soil of the good old USA and know he's there to stay. I hope that day will come soon for all of us.

I've seen plenty of war torn country over here, having been through France, Belgium, Holland, and now Germany. I'm in the 79th Division which you probably know crossed the Rhine on March 24 and have been in combat with them until the cessation of hostilities. I'm wondering now what the future has in store for us, since the motto today is Two Down and One To Go.

Well I guess that's all for this time. Good luck to everyone. I will write again when I have an opportunity and the occasion permits.

Yours,
Wm. F. Breidert

Other than his wife and son, he is survived by his mother, Mrs. Louise Bush and a sister, Mrs. Mildred Cave of Calvert, Texas.

He was a member of Lockport lodge, A. F. and A. M. Masonic services were held Sunday afternoon at the Goodale Funeral home. The Rev. Synwolt of the First Methodist church officiated.

Ralph Cagwin is also a patient in Silver Cross hospital. He is suffering from lacerations on his head and knee and a broken arm. Willard Cagwin also suffered shoulder injuries, but was released the same night. Lawrence Fendall also received concussions on the face.

The Well's Corner school district held their closing picnic on Sunday. Due to the cold, inclement weather, the dinner was served at the Homer town hall. A ball game furnished a pleasing recreation in the afternoon. Mrs. Pomeroy will teach the school again this fall.

Roy M. Green Tells a Farm Story

By President Roy M. Green
Colorado A & M College
Fort Collins, Colorado

Big crops and good prices let a wheat farmer not long ago with $30,000 cash in the bank. Said he, "If I don't invest this in inflated land values, what can I do with it to earn anything?" I said to him, "Did you ever think of using part of it to insure yourself a steadier farm income after the war? For $150 a month, or $1,800 a year in War Bonds, you can begin to collect ten years after the war $200 a month. As you will be getting older by that time, wouldn't that be a better supplement to what income the farm then produces than having to turn again to the cream can and what your wife can make out of chickens? Wouldn't it be a nice retirement fund for a fellow that is now 55 years old? Wouldn't you like to have had $200 a month cash coming in last year?"

In addition, if you can put in War Bonds a lump-sum as reserve for operations in bad years, for deferred purchases of equipment, for repairs, for up-keep, for new household equipment; and then whatever the postwar adjustment, you would have an easier time of it than you had last time.

In The Fight Against Inflation

By William E. Kaiser

"Help Your OPA Help You" is a new slogan in the fight against inflation, adopted by your war price and rationing board No. 31-1 it was stated today by Walter Berggren chairman.

He said citizens sometimes have indicated a "let OPA do it" sentiment and the board, seeking a way to emphasize the need of citizen-board partnership, hit upon the slogan as expressing essential cooperation.

"Right now it is more important than ever that the people of the many communities served by War Price and Rationing Board 31-1 help the board do an effective job of price control and rationing," said Mr. Berggren.

Food will continue scarce as we speed up the Japanese war and temptations to pay a few cents over ceiling prices will be many.

But, buyers must realize that this encourages inflation and inflation is as much our enemy as the Japs. We cannot afford to let down our guard in this last round.

The continuance of these rules are urged for all housewives: 1. Look for ceiling price lists in the stores. 2. Pay only legal prices—and ration points in full. 3. Buy only what you need. 4. Report any violations to the local war price and rationing board. The board price will investigate—and not involve you.

Beware Booby Trap Pennies. Those "just a few cents" overcharges add up to dollars thrown away by you. Ration chiselers cheat YOU and YOUR relatives and friends. Those "just a few cents" sow the seed toward INFLATION.

This writer will speak and supply interesting films of the war to any groups of meetings. Call him at the B. 1. 340 or at his residence Harvey 378.

Second June Frost In This Area

Will County received an unwelcome from Jack Frost Sunday and Monday night. The temperature at the municipal airport near Joliet registered 34 degrees Monday morning, and altho it climbed higher during the day, it remained quite cold all day.

Most of farm and garden crops survived the cold, but many potato plants that were of good stand, were well frosted. A large number of flower plants at Pilcher park greenhouse were killed by the frost. Many other flower plants were nipped.

This cool weather has extended from New England west to the continental divide in the eastern Rockies, and south as far as Tennessee and Arkansas.

Weather forecasters in Chicago said their was no immediate relief for the dislodging of the large mass of cold air which moved in from the Hudson Bay region last week. Warm air, probably would not drive out the cool masses before Saturday.

Frost cover the area of Wisconsin, Michigan, northeastern Minnesota and extreme northern Illinois and Indiana.

Wisconsin reported heavy losses in tomato, strawberry and cabbage plants. In Minnesota, tomatoes, peas, and beans were the plants mostly damaged. The growers will be forced to replant.

REDUCED AUTO LICENSE FEE TO SERVICEMEN

Automobile license fees will be reduced to discharged servicemen and members of the armed forces on leave or furlough, if a measure sponsored by Secretary of State Edw. J. Barrett become a law.

The bill provides that servicemen on furlough, may operate their cars on a permit for a 30-day period for a 50c fee for the duration of the war. Honorably discharged servicemen, under the measure, may procure a half year license, valid from July 1 to January 1, 1946 for a dollar. A windshield sticker would be issued to the veteran instead of license plates.

Dying Of Elms In Illinois

During the summer of 1944, large numbers of elms died in many places in Illinois from what appeared to be a destructive disease. The dying trees were observed in 38 towns and local areas in 17 counties, mainly in a band stretching southwestward across the state.

Some of the trees examined were being killed by phloem necrosis, the virus disease which has been destroying so many elms in the Ohio valley during the past several years. However, many of the diseased trees observed did not show the symptoms of phloem necrosis. Investigations are in progress to determine whether prompt removal of dead trees will tend to prevent the spread of phloem necrosis or any other disease that may be killing elms in Illinois. No treatment has yet been developed that will cure trees affected by phloem necrosis or protect unaffected trees. Dead trees, however, harbor insects, are unsightly, and frequently become a hazard. Hence their removal is justified.

In areas where many elms are dying, it is suggested that the remaining healthy trees be kept in a vigorous growing condition by proper care, especially by feeding and watering. Tree fertilizers, to be most effective, should contain a high percentage of nitrogen.

Bake cornbread or shortcake. Make creamed ham, stretching it with hard egg and diced celery. Serve between and over cornbread or shortcake.

The above table bears out the old adage that "Where there's a will there's a way." In this instance it applies to the question of stretching the limited supply of meat that Mrs. Housewife is able to buy under wartime rationing. Here are just a few ideas that may be used in preparing three different pork cuts—sausage, chops, hocks or knuckles, and ham—to make the meat go further. There are many other appetizing ways to extend pork, as well as beef and lamb.

Marines (left photo) kneel in prayer before the chaplain's raised chalice at services which followed the dedication of the Fourth Marine Division Cemetery on Iwo Jima. Major General Clifton B. Protestant, Catholic and Jewish services for the dead were held immediately after the benediction which closed the ceremony. A FEW old-timers were talking a day or two ago about the best combination pitching staffs, including two stars. It all began on a visit to Detroit where naturally they were talking about Newhouser and Trout, who came close to winning the pennant for the Tigers last fall.

I could take them back to the days of Mathewson and McGinnity, a pretty fair two-man combination. There were others, including Jack Chesbro, who were just as good or just as effective, anyway. But those were times far away and long ago. Few modern fans recall their names. But this is getting away from all-star pitching strength where two men are concerned on one team. Several requests have come in from servicemen, especially those overseas, to hear more about Newhouser and Trout, the winning Tiger combination.

We put this problem up to E. A. Batchelor, the Detroit expert, who came through promptly with the following:

"Newhouser had threatened to be a fine pitcher ever since he joined the Tigers at the age of 18, with a very limited minor league experience. He had plenty of 'swift' and an excellent curve, but he also had two serious defects. He never could get the ball over the plate without easing up on his stuff and he sulked and pouted whenever things went wrong for him. It used to be said that Harold was licked as soon as an error was made behind him—that he was a rank quitter if he didn't get all the breaks.

Couldn't Stand Defeat

"The trouble seemed to be that he couldn't get over the idea that he should win every game he pitched. No matter how good his performance, if the other team outscored the Tigers he felt that Fate had kicked him right in the seat of the pants. There may be better ways of acquiring unlimited unpopularity with one's teammates than a chronic martyr complex, but we don't recall any of them at the moment. Newhouser was cordially disliked by the entire Tiger squad. When he pitched the whole team tightened up and played its worst ball.

"Paul Richards probably is deserving of a great deal of credit for Newhouser's development from a problem child into a real pitcher. This veteran backstop was acquired by the Tigers from Atlanta, where he had been manager, to help fill the hole left by the departure of George 'Birdie' Tebbets for the army.

"He conveyed the idea that a successful pitcher works on the batters' weaknesses and does not merely try to throw the ball past them by main strength. And so, in one year, he developed all the latent talent of the young southpaw and helped to earn for him the award of most valuable player in the American League.

Gay, Eccentric Trout

"Trout, in many respects, is the exact opposite of Newhouser in mental make-up. Instead of being a sulking, self-centered athlete, he was always the 'good fellow.' He worked all his waking hours at his trade of being a charming eccentric. Nothing seemed to worry him—not even the necessity for winning an occasional ball game. It was the feeling of the fans that he was more interested in clowning than in pitching; that he would rather get a laugh than a digit in the win column. Everybody liked him and everybody wanted to see him win, everybody, except, it seemed, himself.

"Then, all of a sudden, Paul seemed to tumble to the idea that his extra curricular activities as the life of the party could be reconciled with doing a serious job on the mound. Just about the time he was ready to receive one of those long green railroad tickets to the minors, he settled down to work. He won 20 games in 1943 with a club that wasn't going anywhere in particular and he liked the idea of being a winner so well that he kept it up in 1944 with 27 victories.

"It wasn't that Paul suddenly uncovered some new stuff. He hasn't a bit more on the ball now than he had when he was struggling to break even. He always has had a fine curve ball and exceptional control, to say nothing of poise that even an earthquake couldn't disturb. He just naturally grew up—at long last.

"One characteristic that these two pitchers have in common is their willingness to work. One or the other was in over half of the games that the Tigers played last year, in almost 70 games of record. Even when they were starting games far oftener than is customary in the major leagues, they were doing relief work for faltering associates. And their associates last season had a positive genius for faltering. In fact, all the rest of the Tiger pitchers combined, won only 32 games, or a little over half as many as the two stars.

Dehydrating Quality Surplus Vegetables

Dried Products Ideal Winter Food Addition

LACK of jars need not prevent the gardener from laying aside a large amount of this year's garden products for winter use.

Before drying, vegetables should be precooked in steam or boiling water. Steam cooking will furnish a superior product to those cooked in water. They should be removed as soon as tender and placed in the drier.

A satisfactory drier is illustrated here. Or it may be advisable to dry in the oven, or in the sun, behind glass. It is advisable to furnish air circulation by means of electric fan, if possible. This process involves bringing currents of relatively dry air into intimate contact with the material to be dried.

The temperature in the drier should not be hot enough to cook the food, yet it should be of a suitable temperature to cause evaporation of moisture. The drying must be a continuous process in order to prevent the growth of organisms.

For best results foods should be cut into uniform sizes and spread evenly in thin layers to dry, stirring frequently. After the product has been dried, it should be conditioned for about 10 days, but stirring from time to time, to prevent mold. After this period it may be placed in sealed air tight bags, such as cellophane or waxed paper, or in sealed jars, or placed in a stone crock, if desired.

Properly dried vegetables, as well as fruits, prove a welcome addition in the winter menus, and lose little of their value when properly handled.

Eight-Point Dairy Program Is Efficient

1. Grow plenty of high-quality roughage
2. Balance your herd with your feed supply
3. Keep production records on each cow in your herd
4. Practice disease control methods
5. Produce milk and cream of the highest quality
6. Adopt labor-saving methods
7. Take care of your land
8. Develop a sound breeding program

Age Effect in Calf

After the first calf is dropped, age has little or no apparent effect on cows getting in calf, according to E. J. Perry of Rutgers university.

Bulls show a gradual reduction in breeding efficiency with advancing age, with the exception of the seven-year-olds. Heifers being bred for the first time require more services than the older cows. Breeding efficiency of the cows are not appreciably influenced by the length of time between calvings.

Little Kid

By WILLIAM J. MURDOCH
McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
WNU Features.

MRS. HASTINGS woke with a start. She lay in the dark, feeling her heart pound while she mentally routed the fear remaining from her nightmare. Outside the wind mournfully hummed a lonely song of summer midnight. A storm was brewing: they would all need light blankets. Mrs. Hastings reached for her robe on the chair beside the table.

Then she remembered the quarrel with Frankie. Not a quarrel, really, for her first-born carried his 16 years in a manner that would not permit of bickering. But he had been resentful when she chided him for buying her a bottle of perfume with the money he had earned on his first Saturday of helping at the corner grocery.

Frankie was a fine, splendid boy to think of his mother when he received compensation for his first job. But she wanted him to learn the value of money, to realize that at this time there were more important things than luxuries. At the supper table, however, when she saw his stormy, sullen face she knew she had been cruel not to withhold her criticism until he had tasted all the sweetness of his gesture.

Mrs. Hastings tiptoed into Jackie's room. She covered him, and as she looked down at the child she recalled Frankie at that age. He was sensitive and highstrung even then. How many, many hours he had spent in the lonesome, sparsely furnished spare room on the third floor, banished there to reflect upon his moody willfulness! It seemed but yesterday. Mrs. Hastings kissed Jackie and left noiselessly.

Softly she opened the door of Frankie's room and peeped in. His bed was empty, its spread unruddied. She turned abruptly and hurried back to her own room. The hands on the clock pointed to 12:45. Mrs. Hastings was frightened. Frankie wasn't the type to stay out late just because his father was away on a business trip. He had left the house early in the evening to go to a show with Tim Strong and Joe Dietrich. But now it was nearly one o'clock!

What if Frankie were in some hospital, calling for her? There was no telephone in the house; she couldn't be reached. What if his injured feelings had spurred him to hurt her by running away? And there were so many young boys joining the armed services. . . .

Jackie would be safe alone for a short time. Mrs. Hastings went to her bedroom and dressed. A few minutes later she hurried to the Dietrichs' house in the next block. It was dark, and Joe, when he was awakened by his father in answer to Mrs. Hastings' imperative knock, only increased her anxiety. "Tim and I left Frankie at the corner hours ago, Mrs. Hastings," the boy said sleepily. "Gosh, I hope nothing's wrong!"

"Thanks, Joe," said Mrs. Hastings. She wanted to run, hard and fast, anywhere. "No, nothing's wrong."

Nothing wrong? Mrs. Hastings stood on the sidewalk in front of the house. There was only one thing to do; one place to go. She lowered her head to the gathering storm and started. She ran a block, then walked, then ran until she reached the police station, breathless and filled with dread. The interview with the desk sergeant was brief and grim. He was polite, cold and detached. Mrs. Hastings steered herself for a blow at the officer glanced through reports.

But there was nothing there for her, not even hope, for now Frankie was alone somewhere, beyond her help. Mrs. Hastings escaped to the clean air outside. Frankie, Frankie.

She let herself into the house. Tormented, her nerves ragged, she all but collapsed into a chair. If only she had been more understanding!

A footfall in the upper hallway startled her. "Jackie?" she called, trying to keep her voice calm. "What is it, dear?"

"I'm cold. I want a blanket." Mrs. Hastings rose quickly. "Frankie!" she cried, running up the stairs. "Frankie, where have you been?"

The boy kept his eyes averted from her tearful smile. He rubbed one hand through his tousled hair and plucked at the leg of his pajamas in embarrassment. "In the spare room," he said in a low voice.

A glimmer of recollection came to Mrs. Hastings.

"Remember how you used to send me up there to shame me out of my pouting?" Frankie asked self-consciously, grinning up at his mother. "Well—aw, tonight I acted like a kid when you explained about my present, and I felt pretty cheap about it all evening. You were in bed when I came home, and I thought maybe I could square myself for acting the way I did if I went up to the third floor. Silly, I guess—I'm sorry, Mom, honest. Gosh, do you suppose I'll ever grow up?"

Laughing, her voice unnaturally high, Mrs. Hastings held Frankie close. Yes, he would grow up. He had grown that night, and she was thankful that he had matured enough to treat himself like a little kid—her little Frankie—for the first time.

The news-weekly's sister (a picture mag) on the same date reports that the dinner was given by Stettinius in his (Stetty's) apartment! Cum, cum, fellers, who's right?

James Gordon Bennett, who founded the N. Y. Herald, made it the most popular newspaper of its time. . . . "I make it a rule," he declared, "never to be more than a day ahead of the people and never an hour behind!"

Franco was discussing the breaking off of relations with Germany with one of his henchmen. . . . "I believe," stated the latter, "that we should take further steps to show that we are now in the United Nations camp."

"What do you suggest?" queried the ace bull-throver of Spain.

"I think," continued the henchman, "we should set our flags at half mast for Roosevelt and pay tribute to him in the press and on the radio. We should also play Allied music on the air, including even some of the Russian composers."

"That's going a little too far," warned Franco. "If we get too democratic we may not be invited to the San Francisco conference."

Believe it or don't, so wot? . . . Fat, paunchy Hermann Goering, nazistunk No. 2, who was sooo brave and fearless when his luft-waffe was blasting Coventry to bits, showed his true colors when caught. To the American soldiers assigned to watch him, he tremulously pleaded: "Guard me well."

"Oh, we will," responded one of the G.I.s. "I come from a farm, and a long time ago my father taught me how to take care of pigs."

A group of senators were discussing the work of the security conference. Said an anti-Soviet politico: "I'm disappointed in the work of our delegation. They should have seen to it that the Russians were put in their place."

"I agree," thundered a second Sovvy-bogeyman, "and if the Reds don't know their place, we've got to show 'em—by force of arms, if necessary!"

"Wait a moment," interrupted a liberal senator. "All you fellows talk about is hemming the Soviets in and fighting them. I thought it was the Axis we were fighting."

"Fight the Axis, fight the Axis!" snapped the hate-Russia gen. "That's all you ever think of!"

When Norwegian police threw Nazi-puppet Quisling into the jug, he raised vigorous objections. The cops relieved him of a satchel containing chocolate and cognac.

"Give me back my satchel!" Quisling ranted. "I have done nothing but good for Norway, and a statesmen like me should not be placed in an ordinary cell!"

"Don't worry," soothed one of his guards. "You will soon be placed in an underground vault."

A wealthy couple had taken in a little boy of Swiss parentage at the start of the war. His family sent the youngster on here because of fear of bombings, and he was cared for by his foster-parents.

The other day the youngster was playing with the offspring of the family cook. The cook's kid asked the other: "Was your dad a soldier, and did he have to fight in the war?"

"No," answered the little fellow. "My father didn't fight because we are Swiss, and we are neutral."

"Yes, I know," replied the first. "My mother's family are Swedish, and they are neutral, too, but which side was your country neutral for?"

By Way of Report: Recent photos showing a soldier on his knees with his eyes blindfolded and a Jap samurai sword-juggler ready to behead him are 2½ years old. . . . The Allied soldier was not an American. He was Australian. And the King of England awarded the Victoria Cross posthumously to his family.

The other day the Will Hays office announced that it could not permit national release of a full length documentary film recording many of the Nazi atrocities.

Ask any wounded marine marking time in a hospital if he wouldn't like to hear that congress took off the stain of compulsory apology from the record of the late Major-General Smedley Butler, two-time winner of the congressional medal, but loser in his denunciation of Mussolini for killing a child with his speeding auto and failing to halt for first aid. The state department in 1933 made Butler take a spanking and apologize for saying what you and you and you have said frequently.

at Bouganwald, Germany. This camp was built in 1933 and at that time contained 51,000 German citizens who would not go along with the Hitler regime and Nazism. These concentration camps were governed by the Storm Troopers. Each prisoner wore a sleeve emblem of a triangle of one color or another. In black, denoting those who refused to work purple, who were political prisoners green, civilian and red, religious. All prisoners were men and boys of 16 years or older.

The idea carried out was to starve them, so they would become malnourished, so they would become prey to disease of which there were four—typhus, dysentery, tuberculosis and typhoid. Their food consisted each day of one piece of black bread and one bowl of thin slimy soup. There were no sanitary provisions. They were housed in a wooden barracks lined on each wall with four shelves which became the beds of the prisoners, with no pillow and one dirty blanket for cover. They only had the clothes which they wore on entering the camp.

There were two buildings in the center of the camp, one called a hospital, which had nothing pertaining to a hospital and what went on in them no one knew, for all who went in, never came out again. Volunteers were asked from the prisoners and many answered, they being used in this so called hospital as human guinea pigs, in order to perfect medicine etc. for their fighting force.

The other building was made of concrete and contained four ovens. Two hundred bodies a day were cremated in these ovens which were fired by coke. If those dying were not enough to fill the quota there would be executions, to make up that number. When executions did take place, which was almost daily every one who could possibly walk had to come and watch and if anyone made a remark, rebelled or made the slightest action, they were called out next to the execution place. Therefore when the U. S. Army soldiers arrived at this camp and freed them, they would not talk as they had been cowed for so long a time and learned it was dangerous to talk, and neither would they leave, they were so glad to be with our boys and wanted to stay with them.

When this group entered they found 1800 bodies unburied and 20,000 prisoners who were by now made up of prisoners of the German occupied countries, therefore there were men there of Germans, French Poles, Hungarians, Slovaks, Czechs, Belgians, Austrians, and some we cannot now recall. They were all dirty, not dirty, but filthy, weak, sick, discouraged. Some were given blood transfusions, but little hope was held out to save them.

Senator Brooks said our boys did a magnificent job of bombing. They hit the supply lines, but not camps and as the supply line of coke was stopped, the bodies could not be cremated.

Next they were taken to Nordhausen where another concentration camp was located, much larger than the above mentioned one, containing 10 ovens and where also were a large number of unburied bodies.

In this camp also were center buildings. Mr. Brooks said he went thru every nook and corner.

In one of these buildings, men were taken for execution altho they probably did not realize it. They were taken into the building, at the end of a small hallway, was a door and they were told to go thru it. As they stepped thru it, if they were not too weak to walk, they were shoved thru, was a trap door and a stepping on it, fell 14 feet on a concrete floor. If they were not dead then, they had a noose placed around their neck and hung on one of the ten hooks for that purpose.

This is a grand opportunity to meet old high school friends and it is hoped that many from this section will attend.

they were alive, they were clubbed to death evidently, as there was a large wooden club, similar to a large wooden potato masher. It was covered with blood and there were dried pools of blood on the floor.

Senator Brooks said they saw the Krupp works at Essen, the largest ammunition plant in all Germany, completely leveled, also oil plants. Chemical plants etc. Some of these plants were right next to their prisoner of war camps, wherein our boys were kept. The bombing of our boys was so good, they leveled these works but not an iota of damage to our boys camp.

He said the boys who were prisoners of war, were not mistreated, altho they did not have an over abundance of food, yet they had enough to get by. The Storm Troopers were not in charge of these camps, but the German Military Police.

The investigating trip took them to one underground city, which extended for 31 miles and where the V bombs were being made to blast England at the last minute. There were thousands of them, lying uncompleted because the allies had blasted their supply lines. These underground cities and works were manned by 35,000 slave laborers. It was well lighted and air conditioned.
